Five day Nurturing Future Leadership program for faculty members kicks off at IIT (ISM) Dhanbad.

Faculty members from different universities, academic and technical institutes, and other centers of higher education today embarked on a five-day training to sharpen their leadership skills as IIT (ISM) as part of a nurturing future leadership program organized under the esteemed Malviya Mission Teacher Training Program, which kicked off at the Conference Hall of the Institute Innovation Hub (i2h) building of IIT (ISM).

Prof. Sukumar Mishra, Director IIT (ISM), who was present during the inaugural function as Chief Guest, said that adaptability is one of the most crucial characteristics required to become an effective leader and advised the participating faculty members to develop followers not among the students and fellow faculty members but also should have good relations with their respective heads.

“The management of relations between these three factors in any institution depends on the situational adaptability skills of the concerned faculty members,” said Prof. Mishra, adding that a lot of things depend on the wisdom or skill of the faculty members.

Prof. MK Singh, Dean Academic, who was also present during the occasion, said that leadership is the basic trait of teachers, but what is now required to bring that leadership outside the classroom among the masses.

He further threw light on the life and work of Pandit Madan Mohan Malviya, founder of Banaras Hindu University, taking inspiration from which the nurturing further leadership program has been launched.

Prof. Somnath Chattopadhyay of the Department of Mechanical Engineering said that the nurturing future leadership program will provide the opportunity where people from different parts of the country will come together and exchange ideas.

Prof. Mrinalini Pandey, Coordinator, Nurturing Future Leadership Program, while delivering the welcome address, said, “The program is designed to help each of you explore your potential and become a visionary, empathetic, and effective leader.

In today’s dynamic and evolving academic environment, leadership skills are not only a requirement but very imperative.

Faculty members from Central University of Kashmir, Central Sanskrit University, Jamia Millia University, Binod Bihari Mahto Koyalanchal University, Gurununak College, etc. are participating in the five-day program.
